Early Intervention for Young Drug Users

What FreD can achieve

The intervention supports young persons in developing a critical attitude to their alcohol and drug use. Around 80% of participants consume less after completing the course or stop taking illegal drugs altogether.

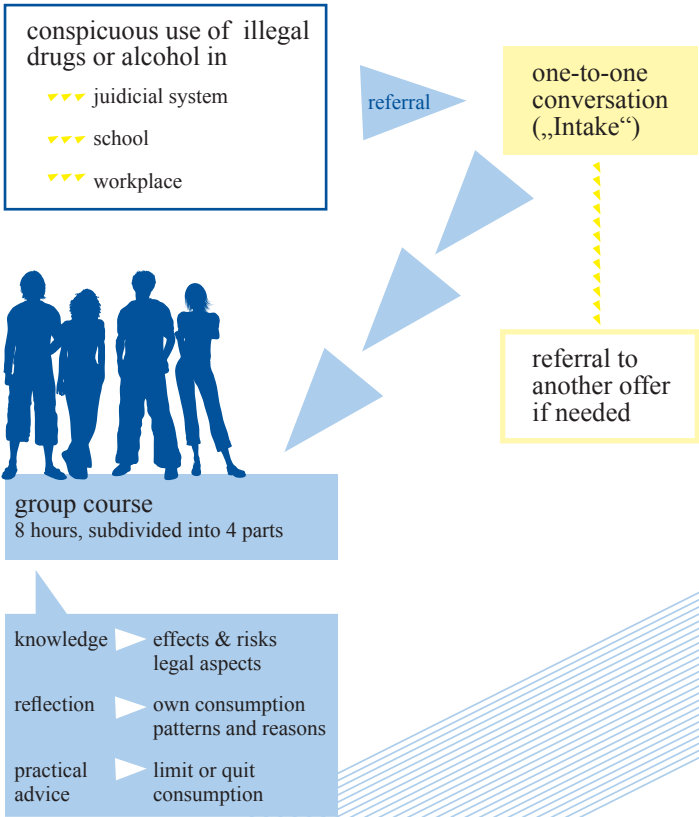

An evaluation study has confirmed these positive results of the German model project FreD at a European level (facts of the interim report).

Training of technical competences

The training course will teach you:

- how to motivate young persons to re-think their drug use and initiate changes in their behaviour,
- how to structure eight hours of group work and how to use interactive methods in such a way that more than 80% of participants are (very) satisfied with the course,
- how to build sustainable structures of cooperation and networks in your town/region,
- how to take into account the respective legal context,
- how to do the accompanying course evaluation.

Structure of Intervention

How you will benefit

- You can draw on the experiences of FreD trainers from 11 countries.
- You will meet experts from all across Europe and become part of an international network.
- You will get a copy of the European handbook on implementing FreD goes net.

Refunding

It is possible to secure (full or partial) refunding to cover the course fee, travel and accommodation by applying to the national agencies of the EU Lifelong Learning Programme. Contact your national agency to find out the necessary application details and deadlines.

Addresses of all national agencies are listed here:
http://ec.europa.eu/education/lifelong-learning-programme/doc1208_en.htm

Participants

- experts in addiction prevention and youth welfare,
- related professional groups working with young persons.

Previous experience in working with young persons and/or addiction prevention and care is helpful. Training two experts per country is an advantage in implementing this approach.

Workshop language

The workshop language will be English.
